Compartments.

Some time within the next week, probably Saturday, the municipal swimming pool at Owen park will be opened to the public, barring unforeseen accidents that might delay completion.

Men and teams were busy yesterday scraping the last bit of dirt from the big reservoir, and dumping sand on the bottom to provide a "sand bottom." Other workmen were working in the bath house, which is also near completion, and which is located at the north end of the pool. It was the intention of the park board yesterday to begin running water into the pool about midnight last night.

The pool is as nearly sanitary as is possible to make it without using concrete. The reservoir has been thoroughly scraped, and a liberal

Chamber of Commerce to Help City Protest New Gas Rate Increase

What part the chamber of commerce is to take in fighting the proposed increase in gas rates by the Oklahoma Natural Gas company is to be decided by directors of this organization at their weekly luncheon in the Kennedy restaurant at noon today.

It is probable, according to Managing Director Clarence B. Douglas, that a special legal committee will be appointed to co-operate with the city's legal department in a vigorous protest to the corporation commission at the proper time.

coating of sand—approximately 12 inches—has been spread over the bottom. In depth the pool will be from two to nine feet, the deepest point being at the diving board. The south end of the pool will contain approximately seven feet of water.

From the standpoint of arrangement and convenience, the bath house is a model. It is not large, but is constructed so it may be added to from year to year with ease and without spoiling the architecture.

It is divided into two compartments, one for men and the other for women. The women's side is completely separated from the men's side, and is equipped with 14 booths provided with curtains. Through the unobscured arrangement, it is necessary that bathers go under a shower bath upon leaving and upon re-entering the bath house.

SUES ON OIL LEASE SALE

Johnson Claims Buyers Have Failed to Pay Agreed Purchase Price.

Judgment for $2,600 was asked by B. L. Johnson in district court yesterday against Paul Burton and B. F. Hoss, the petitioner claiming the amount to be due from the sale of an oil lease to the defendants.

Under a contract dated August 30, 1919, according to the petition, Burton and Hoss agreed to purchase a lease in section 4-18-14, Tulsa county for $2,600. Johnson says he fulfilled all conditions of the contract and has produced a merchantable title to the property which the defendants now refuse to accept.

The Slick Dude Is an Ignorant Bulldozer

When Minnie threatened to call Max we naturally would have expected that the Slick Dude, who boasted that his name was Extravagance, would have had enough sense to go, but he was a "bulldozer" and had "got by" with his rough stuff so often that his judgment was warped and he did not realize what a proposition he was really up against. He looked at Minnie in a cynical and overbearing sort of way and said, "You silly little thing, you don't know a good thing when you see it. You are wasting your life with these ignorant people. I would not have anything to do with people who do no know how to 'make money easy,' or those who till the soil, or those who do not wear diamonds or those that are not above riding in Ford cars, or those who do their own cooking. Such people are ignorant. They are behind the times, they are not up to date. They are beneath my notice. My name is Extravagance and everybody must look up to me! And as for Max, what do you think I care for him! Your husband is so far beneath me that I would not even talk to him! You would find it so much nicer for yourself if you would live in the Extravagant Family, but now I would not have you unless I could work you over some."

(To be continued in Monday's World.)

Max and Minnie are working at Traders No. 4 at 105 East First Street. Thousands of thrifty people are coming to our store to save money. Why not you?
